

Communicate to Understand

Do I listen to understand, or listen to answer and defend?

---

Print this alongside the module, or type into it — every box is a real form field.
The workbook records what you did. This sheet records what you learned.

1 · WATCH AND LISTEN

Take these one at a time. A note you write in your own words is worth more than a highlight you never reread.

Effective Communication

Video overview of communication themes.

Notes — and the timestamp you want to come back to

5 Listening Habits That Ruin Communication

The five bad habits and how to interrupt them.

Notes — and the timestamp you want to come back to

Why vulnerability needs a safety check

When disclosure exercises misfire.

Notes — and the timestamp you want to come back to

The Three Levels of Deep Communication

Facts, ideas, and feelings.

Notes — and the timestamp you want to come back to

2 · DECKS AND FIELD GRAPHICS

On this module: Signal and Noise; Relational Architecture; The Art of Effective Communication; Mastering Marriage Communication Guide.

What stood out — and what I would push back on

3 • READING NOTES

Each report is an optional study aid built from thematically related research. It reflects the source material, not ministry doctrine — read it against the module's caution.

Beyond Small Talk

Early in their relationship, Nicky and Sila Gumbel learned a profound lesson about the difference between sharing information and truly connecting.

Moving past logistics.

What I take from this

Why You're Lonelier Than You Should Be

One of the most striking ironies of modern relationships is what I call the "Proximity Paradox." It is the phenomenon of two people sharing a zip code, a floor plan, and a bed, yet feeling like total strangers.

Counter-intuitive truths about connection.

What I take from this

Effective Communication and Connection

Effective communication serves as the fundamental bridge to intimacy and connection in marriage.

Executive briefing on communication.

What I take from this

10 questions

Answer from memory first, then check yourself against the module page. The score matters less than the last column: a question you missed shows you exactly which part of the module to reread.

1. According to the Three Levels of Communication model, which type of exchange is said to build the deepest intimacy and connection?

RIGHT

MISSED

2. What is identified as a primary danger of the 'Reassuring' bad listening habit?

RIGHT

MISSED

3. During the second step of Reflective Listening, what should the listener avoid doing?

RIGHT

MISSED

4. Why do the presenters recommend using a physical object, like a napkin, during the reflective listening exercise?

RIGHT

MISSED

5. In Step 4 of the Reflective Listening protocol, what is the listener encouraged to do instead of giving advice?

RIGHT

MISSED

6. Which of the following is cited as a reason someone might find it difficult to express their feelings?

RIGHT

MISSED

7. The presenters suggest that the aim in marriage should be to listen how much compared to talking?

RIGHT

MISSED

8. According to the Independent Review notes, what is a critical limitation facilitators should mention regarding emotional vulnerability?

RIGHT

MISSED

9. What does the bad habit of 'Disengaging' often involve, according to the presenters?

RIGHT

MISSED

10. In the demonstration regarding moving house, what was Sila's specific emotional concern about Nicky's 'over-optimism'?

RIGHT

MISSED

Score out of 10

The one I missed that matters most — and what I am going back to reread

5 · FLASHCARD DRILL

This module's deck holds 50 cards. Run it until you can answer without help, then note what still slips.

Cards marked known

Cards I still need to review

Before you close this module

Field action: Complete one listen-back conversation

Finish line: Before giving your view, you restated her concern and its significance, asked what you missed, and revised until she said it was fair — without requiring agreement or reciprocal performance.

Study is not the assignment. The finish line is.