

Repair Hurt and Practice Forgiveness

Where do confession, restitution, boundaries, and forgiveness differ?

Print this alongside the module, or type into it — every box is a real form field.
The workbook records what you did. This sheet records what you learned.

1 · WATCH AND LISTEN

Take these one at a time. A note you write in your own words is worth more than a highlight you never reread.

Healing Hurt and Forgiveness

Session video on naming a hurt and making a specific repair.

Notes — and the timestamp you want to come back to

Navigating Marital Conflict

Where unresolved anger goes when nobody addresses it.

Notes — and the timestamp you want to come back to

The Danger of Forgiving: Rhinos and Hedgehogs

Deep-dive audio on the two anger styles and where the model stops applying.

Notes — and the timestamp you want to come back to

When Marriage Advice Becomes Ammunition

Safety inversion: how repair language gets weaponised. Read against the module caution.

Notes — and the timestamp you want to come back to

2 · DECKS AND FIELD GRAPHICS

On this module: Marital Repair Blueprint; The Topography of Repair; The Path to Healing; Marriage Conflict and Forgiveness Guide.

What stood out — and what I would push back on

3 • READING NOTES

Each report is an optional study aid built from thematically related research. It reflects the source material, not ministry doctrine — read it against the module's caution.

Healing Hurt and Anger

The fourth session of "The Marriage Course" focuses on the inevitability of hurt within marriage and the essential processes required for healing.

Executive briefing — best starting point for this module.

What I take from this

Beyond the Apple Throw

The reality of marriage is that we will all hurt our partner—often in small ways, sometimes in massive ones, and frequently without even realizing we've done it.

Longer treatment of anger, repair, and what forgiveness does not mean.

What I take from this

Rhinos, Hedgehogs, and the Buried-Alive Rule

In even the most vibrant marriages, partners will inevitably wound one another. These hurts are often unintentional—a thoughtless word, a forgotten promise, or a cold shoulder—and sometimes the offender isn't even aware they've caused a fracture.

Popular-article register — use as a prompt, not as proof.

What I take from this

10 questions

Answer from memory first, then check yourself against the module page. The score matters less than the last column: a question you missed shows you exactly which part of the module to reread.

1. What is the primary 'God-given purpose' of anger according to the Episode 4 curriculum?

RIGHT

MISSED

2. In the 'Rhino and Hedgehog' typology, which behavior is characteristic of a 'Hedgehog' response to hurt?

RIGHT

MISSED

3. What does the curriculum identify as the primary cause of emotional 'numbness' in a marriage?

RIGHT

MISSED

4. Regarding the three-part healing process, who does the curriculum say should take the initiative to talk about a hurt?

RIGHT

MISSED

5. What is the intended purpose of the 'Richter scale' (1 to 10) in the context of an apology?

RIGHT

MISSED

6. How does the course distinguish a 'true apology' from a defensive one?

RIGHT

MISSED

7. Which statement best describes the course's teaching on the relationship between forgiveness and boundaries?

RIGHT

MISSED

8. According to the course, what is the 'cost' of choosing to forgive a spouse?

RIGHT

MISSED

9. Why does the curriculum argue that trust-building is a separate process from forgiveness?

RIGHT

MISSED

10. What significant safety concern was raised by the external reviewers regarding the 'blocked drain' metaphor?

RIGHT

MISSED

Score out of 10

The one I missed that matters most — and what I am going back to reread

5 • FLASHCARD DRILL

This module's deck holds 40 cards. Run it until you can answer without help, then note what still slips.

Cards marked known

Cards I still need to review

Before you close this module

Field action: Make one specific confession or repair attempt

Finish line: You made a safe, specific repair attempt and completed or scheduled the concrete action you offered, without requiring a particular response.

Study is not the assignment. The finish line is.